

Andrew Makacewicz is a trainer and founder of the biggest riding school in Poland - JNBT. He is also a professional diving, sailing and ski instructor but his adventure with horses started when he was still a kid.

His experience includes long time learning from the best horsemen - such as Pat Parelli, Clinton Anderson, Chris Cox, Richard Winters, David O'Connor, Craig Cameron, Buck Brannaman, Jack Brainard, Lester Buckley and Steve Halfpenny; working for Monty Roberts, training with other great horsemen, working as a cowboy in Montana, studying wild horses behavior and starting wild colts, training few hundred horses annually, giving shows at the National Horse Expos in Poland and Italy, achieving judge license and serving as Secretary General of PLWiR (Polish League of Western Riding & Rodeo). Finally, inspired by Dr Robert Miller, DVM and world-famous horse behaviorist, Andrew started his own multi-level training program for horsemen. The program was well received and the school grew within few years to become one of the biggest in Europe and train thousands of riders - from beginners up to the national team level. JNBT training program is devoted to riders of the whole range of equitation disciplines - like eventing, show jumping, dressage or just trail riding, and is taught by Andrew and JNBT Team instructors in Europe.
